

SHOWING SANTA FE RIVER SOME LOVE

Alicon Calderon, 14, of Santa Fe picks up litter in the Santa Fe River near St. Francis Drive on Saturday during The Watershed Association's ninth annual Love Your River Day hosted by the city and county. This is the third year Calderon has participated in the event and he said, 'I love cleaning up trash. I see it as a game: Evildoers are the ones who throw trash here, and heros are the ones who clean it up.' Last year, Calderon found a container containing used syringes and had filled eight bags of trash by the end of the day. CLYDE MUELLER/THE NEW MEXICAN
